Non-Profit “Helping Others and Giving Hope” with City of Miami Commissioner Manolo Reyes Organizes Farm Share Food Distribution

Helping Others and Giving Hope,” founded by sixteen-year-old community activist has partnered with a City of Miami Commissioner to organize a Farm Share Food Distribution in hopes to assist the communities most needy during this pandemic. Farm Share, a Non-for-Profit Organization has partnered with Commissioner Manolo Reyes and a non-profit called “Helping Others and Giving Hope,” which is run by sixteen-year-old community activist, to provide approximately 500 families with about 25 pounds each of nonperishable food including poultry, vegetables, bread, and juice, and more.

“After seeing the stress that this global pandemic has caused to those who have lost their jobs and the community around the world, I felt like this was the proper event to host for those going through difficult times. I have seen the need in our community firsthand while volunteering with other local groups during these rough times. This seemed as a great opportunity for me to give back to my community as I love to do. My hope is that this will alleviate their personal situation a little bit and provide them with some hope.” Said founder Steven Ferreiro
