Helping Others And Giving Hope Gives Back To Our First Responders This Thanksgiving Holiday

Non-profit Helping Others And Giving Hope has organized a Food Drive and have gathered donations from several local businesses and the community to give back to those first responders who can't spend their Thanksgiving with their families. Helping Others And Giving Hope has partnered with Publix Supermarkets and Strange Beast Brewery to collect donations and to give out the turkeys to provide approximately 4 fire stations with about 20 pounds of nonperishable food including poultry, vegetables, and more. This was all ran by his founder Steven Ferreiro which is only 16 years old.

"I have been working on this community project for the past month alongside the assistance of the businesses who have sponsored on making sure this community action event would occur and run smoothly. I have seen the amount of hard work our first responders around our communities first hand have done and continue to do. This seemed as a great opportunity for my group "Helping Others And Giving Hope" to give a little back to our own community in a different way as we normally would. My hope is that this will make them feel like if they were at home with their family and feel more appreciated coming from others around their area."
